A small farming hamlet where much of the food in Heorot comes from. Food is sold to the federation and other nearby villages. The only notable point of interest in the hamlet is the wizard's tower owned by Vargrson that sits atop a hill near the edge of town and acts as a local library. There is no temple in the hamlet. Instead, residents congregate at the priest's house for worship during special occasions.

There is not much in the way of buildings or citizens. They are kept safe by Federation guards and they sustain themselves by trading food with the federation. Before the federation, they traded with carters and paid nearby villages to house some of their own soldiers in Freyr for safety.
